Professional Experience and Curriculum Vitae

There's no such thing as a hitting a brick wall for ideas.
Calm and quiet is better than aggressive and loud.
My right hand always knows what my left foot is doing.
Being a good mentor means more practice on your own.

As a creative leader at a global direct sales company with annual sales of nearly $500 million, I led a team of designers and illustrators through an extensive company rebrand. I invented ways to concept and lay out bi-annual catalogs on an aggressive timeline. I unified a creative team to build an annual convention to showcase new products and selling materials.

I've ran my own company where I once gave a talk at a PubWest book publishers conference while standing on my head. Literally. I made my point visually and captured everyone's attention. I was offered two book design projects after that speech.

I'd love to talk to you about your senior art director position. I think I might be your guy.

JOURNEY INTO CROSSFIT

T.J. MURPHY WAS A REFUGEE FROM RUNNING.

Limping away from the finish of yet another comeback marathon, the 47-year-old faced a future with a permanent limp and no sports. Desperate to reclaim his fitness and strength and with nothing to lose, Murphy signed up for his first CrossFit® workout.

In Inside the Box, Murphy exposes the punk-rock sport of fitness and its fascinating culture. Anaerobically blasted by each high-intensity workout, Murphy goes all in to discover a sweat-soaked workout revolution that's transforming bodies and lives.

Available in bookstores, CrossFit gyms, and online. Preview the book at velopress.com/crossfit.
