Professional Experience and Curriculum Vitae

Kendall is a sure thing. A spontaneous whimsy girl who spends her days at a hip design agency in Toronto, and her evenings venturing around the city or by her mum's in the country.

She is forever evolving and trying new things, never scared of taking risks { big or small }, always down for vintage perusing, sketching, listening to music, engaging in conversation, or perfecting the art of being the perfect foodie. Kendall's desire for fashion streams straight from her Grandmother Isabella, so if you are looking to point the blame, please start there. With trunks full of dresses, pant suites, shoes-gloves-and-hats, Kendall has it made when rummaging looking for something to wear ... not to mention her own walk-in closet that is busting of a mix of designer buys and thrifted treasures. Her blog really just started off as a narcissistic approach to wasting time while unemployed.

She is so very-truly-happy something positive is coming out of it – and it has certainly has been a magical ride thus far. Everyday Kendall reminds herself that “everybody dies, but only the lucky ones truly live” – and that is what keeps her head held so high.
