Professional Experience and Curriculum Vitae

Danny Khoury is a designer from Lebanon. He helps individuals and entities identify and form their image, and likes to make things that you use.

Born in Beirut and studied graphic design at the Lebanese American University, he worked at several design agencies creating corporate identities, a variety of printing projects, and advertising campaigns in addition to teaching. This gave him an experience in layouts, branding, packaging, and product design. He is also involved in web design, illustration, and animation.

Currently, Danny is working as a freelance designer and cofounder of USE FOR FUN Design Collective, making design consultancies and starting initiatives like "Beirut Is..." collective illustration exhibition.

With an appreciation of both minimalism and craftsmanship, Danny believes that design is not a commercial end in itself, but rather an experimental process to establish functional and visually compelling forms, which in turn communicate to viewers in a consumer world.
