Professional Experience and Curriculum Vitae
I am a digital Artist.

About my background (in brief): Like many other artists, I have been creating and expressing myself since I was a child. My artistic background begins somewhere in the late 90´s, working with airbrush and making exhibitions at Madrid venues. At the end of the decade I moved to London and studied Art & Design (and I have to say it was completely useless for me, I consider myself an autodidact).

After coming back to Spain, I focused my career as a digital designer and therefore left the art quite abandoned.

As time passed, my artistic concerns returned stronger than ever. I exhibited my work at London (Chelsea), and then began to work in new concepts, starting a journey that led me to this moment, when I am writing these lines for you.

The future is uncertain, but I feel I still have a lot to say with my Art and that the best is yet to come.

I often get asked about the meaning behind my artwork, or what I try to express with it… my answer is that no one – and that includes myself – should tell you what you have to see or not in my Artwork. My goal when creating Art is to transmit an emotion or concept… If I had to write explanations about what is the emotion or concept behind my Art, I would consider that a complete failure, as it would mean that I need to complete with words what I have not been able to transmit with images.

So I am not only avoiding to give any explanation about my Art, but I have also deliberately named my works with letters or numbers in order to remove any possible self-explained title that could tell you something about the composition you look at.

What matters is what you see, not what others (and that includes myself) say you have to see.
