His skills as an observer gives him the edge on creativity. City life, city that we live in, road signs and landmarks are all part of his chosen backgrounds and major parts in his compositions. He has a unique tonal range and uses human element in his photos with geometric details from the environment with a great deal of success.

He stroll the streets for hours on end to find the right location and the elements. His aim is to introduce the viewer to the locations that he is photographing and even in locations that you may be familiar with, he tries to introduce you to a completely unusual compositions.
