Professional Experience and Curriculum Vitae
One of the most interesting aspects of street view exploration is seeing ordinary places rather than only famous tourist attractions. Shops, houses, public spaces, transportation, road signs, and streets can provide clues about daily life.

For example, comparing neighborhoods in different countries can reveal differences in architecture, road design, vehicles, and public infrastructure. Even small details, such as the appearance of storefronts or the way streets are arranged, can make each location feel unique.
