Professional Experience and Curriculum Vitae

My design philosophy stems from a passion with design for public health improvement. Using textiles as communication, the most recent collection uses fashion as a vehicle to playfully nudge people towards behavior change.

I have embraced and contested perceived textile design thinking methodology by creating links between various design disciplines as well as academic connections, therefore producing maximum design functionality. I am using fashion as a way to communicate, and direct people in the right direction for change.

I am a keen linguist and competent in French, Spanish and Italian. I have also studied Arabic and the ancient languages of Latin and Greek. I have travelled extensively, and enjoy using my language skills as well sharing cultural experiences through world cinema and photography.

I am currently on the MA Critical Practice course at Goldsmiths where I am hoping to enhance my existing design skills with design theory and learn about world design from my peers.
