Oct. 20, 1944 Mission to Bomb Galliate Bridge

"My most exciting mission was when we blew up Galliate Railroad Bridge in Italy", he declared. "The bridge was a vital enemy supply and troop route connecting Milan and Turin. We ran into the roughest flak barrage I ever saw. Before we ever hit the target, a burst came through the pilot's compartment shattering the glass and smashing out the top. It was close. Over the fun we were less fortunate. Half of our tail rotor was shot away, wounding the tail gunner. Another burst wounded our radio man. We got back to our Base OK. The target was 100% success despite 70 large holes in our ship."
