SUV.

Hybrid.

Another way to picture your lighting choice. If you could "drive" an appliance, you'd want the fuel sipper, not the guzzler. Fluorescent bulbs use an average of 75% less electricity and last years longer. Plus, they run much cooler. Regular bulbs generate lots of heat and raise your air conditioning costs. And now you can choose among many styles of compact fluorescent light bulbs - from dimmable indoor compacts to reflector floodlights.

What's more, a home that replaces its 5 most-used bulbs with fluorescent bulbs can save $60 a year. A small business can save over $263 a year just by replacing its 10 most-used bulbs.

We've come a long way, but we need to do even more to save money, energy and our environment. For lots of great energy-saving tips, visit FlexYourPower.org, or call 1-866-431-Flex, where you'll find information on rebates and energy-efficient products.

An appliance without an ENERGY STAR logo might as well be an SUV. But your air conditioner doesn't have to be a power guzzler. Just look for the ENERGY STAR label and see how easy it is to keep high energy costs out of your home. In fact, a ceiling fan with an ENERGY STAR logo can help you stay cool in summer and energy-efficient all year long. While everyone is concerned about rising gas prices, we tend to forget how high our home and office energy bills can be.

Simply using a fan instead of a central air conditioner can save you hundreds of dollars per year. And that's no loose change at the gas pump!

Think of your thermostat as a gas tank. Why gulp fuel this winter when you can sip and save? Turn down your thermostat to 68-degrees. For every degree you lower your heat in the 68-degree to 70-degree range, you'll save up to 5 percent. Set your thermostat to 55 degrees or turn it off at night or when away from home, and you can save 5-10 percent.

Consider replacing your old gas appliances with an ENERGY STAR® rated water heater or furnace. If your furnace is over 15 years old, a new ENERGY STAR-rated model is about 15 percent more efficient than standard models. And if you install a programmable thermostat, you can also save up to 15 percent on energy costs.
