In addition to literature, in this part you actually need to collect research material: in this part you investigate the answer to your question. This part of your essay can take many different forms - to get an overview of what kind of research you can do, check out this article by write student essays for money. If you need other people for your survey (e.g. interviews) schedule appointments early and have a backup list, just in case someone cancels.

Tips for the research phase:

Write down useful results from your survey with them. If someone says something interesting during an interview, or if a statistical analysis reveals findings, make a note and write a short sentence in your results section, so you don't have to reread your appendix every time you write.

If you have interviews to transcribe, you can use freeessaywriters or VLC media player to slow down the recordings. This makes it easier to transcribe while you listen.

Tips for the start-up phase:

Read essays from other students who have written on similar topics. This is a good way to gather ideas for your content and to structure your work.

Don't make planning your main task. Yes, if you say that i need someone to write my essay for me, it's important to plan your assignments and get your topic and schedule in order, but don't spend more time on this than necessary. Sometimes it's good to just get started and adjust your schedule later.

Many universities and UASs have essay writing courses and kick-offs to help you get started. It's a great way to gain insight and tips on how to structure your essay and write a good dissertation question. qwrqwrqwr
